The bugbear chief nurses a gushing wound in her side before issuing an order of retreat to her allies. A bright light forms around the angel's dying body, blinding everyone near it as it passes on from the world of the living. With blood streaming down its torso, an enraged hill giant slams its fists into the ground and causes the earth around it to quake.

Bloodied & Bruised provides special combat actions to the creatures in Dragonlance: Shadow of the Dragon Queen, offering new tactics for them to employ in battle. Some of these abilities only have a light impact on how the creature acts, while other "bloodied features" completely change how the monster behaves in battle. Bloodied & Bruised is designed to make the latter half of battle more teeth-clenching than the rounds that came before it.

THE BLOODIED CONDITION

The "bloodied" condition, originally from 4e, is used to signify how a creature is faring in a combat scenario. A creature becomes bloodied when it reaches half of its hit point maximum (rounded down), which acts as a way of communicating the state of an opponent in a fight. Telling the players the creature they are fighting is bloodied shows them how far along in the fight they are and whether they should be planning a retreat or going in for the kill.

For consistency's sake, all creatures listed in this document are given the "bloodied" condition, even where that word may not be the most suitable to use. In some cases, such as with constructs and oozes, the terms "bruised" or "battered" better describe how a creature is faring in a fight. This document also notes the hit point amount a specific creature must have to receive the bloodied condition. This number is static and doesn't take into account things like additional hit points or similar effects.

Some creatures gain new abilities when they become bloodied, making them fight harder or more desperately than before. Some abilities can only be triggered once during an encounter, while others persist for as long as the creature is bloodied.

- While Bloodied… Traits that have this or similar text in the opening, persist for as long as the creature is bloodied.
- When First Bloodied… Traits that have this text in the opening are only triggered when the creature is first bloodied in an encounter. If the creature is healed out of its bloodied state and then made bloodied again later during the same encounter, this ability doesn't trigger again.

Player characters can become bloodied as well. This information can be useful for the party's opponents, as they can see who among the party is closest to falling unconscious and target them accordingly. Some creatures, like lycanthropes, even get abilities that make them extra deadly against bloodied characters.

What is an Encounter? An "encounter" is any physical conflict that the party has against enemies, monsters, or the environment. Its beginning is signified by rolling initiative, and it ends when all characters are out of initiative. Trigger abilities, as presented in this document, can only be used once per encounter.

Bloodied Critters. If a creature has 10 hit points or less, this document provides it with no bloodied abilities. A creature with so few hit points would rarely be in a fight for more than a round or two, and bloodied abilities are excessive for its stat block. However, if you wish to add a bloodied ability to such a creature, we suggest adding the Cornered bloodied ability, Made It Angry strength, or the Worn Out frailty, as defined by this document. See the giant octopus and giant scorpion entries for details on these abilities.

BLOODIED ABILITIES

A creature's abilities depend on the resources the creature has on hand. If a creature is animal-like in nature, it lashes out in desperation or grows tired as the fight goes on, while humanoid opponents might look for ways to leave combat as they see the fight turning against them. For this reason, some bloodied features recur throughout the document, as they are associated with a specific type of creature.

The amount of bloodied abilities also depends on the creature's CR. There is no reason for a creature with only a few hit points to have a ton of new possible actions it can do if it's gonna be defeated in a couple of rounds anyway. Lower CR creatures don't have as many or as complex bloodied abilities as a result.

Bloodied abilities can look as follows:

Ability Recharge. A trait or action is immediately recharged without the creature having to roll for it.

New Ability. The creature gains a new trait or action while in its bloodied state.

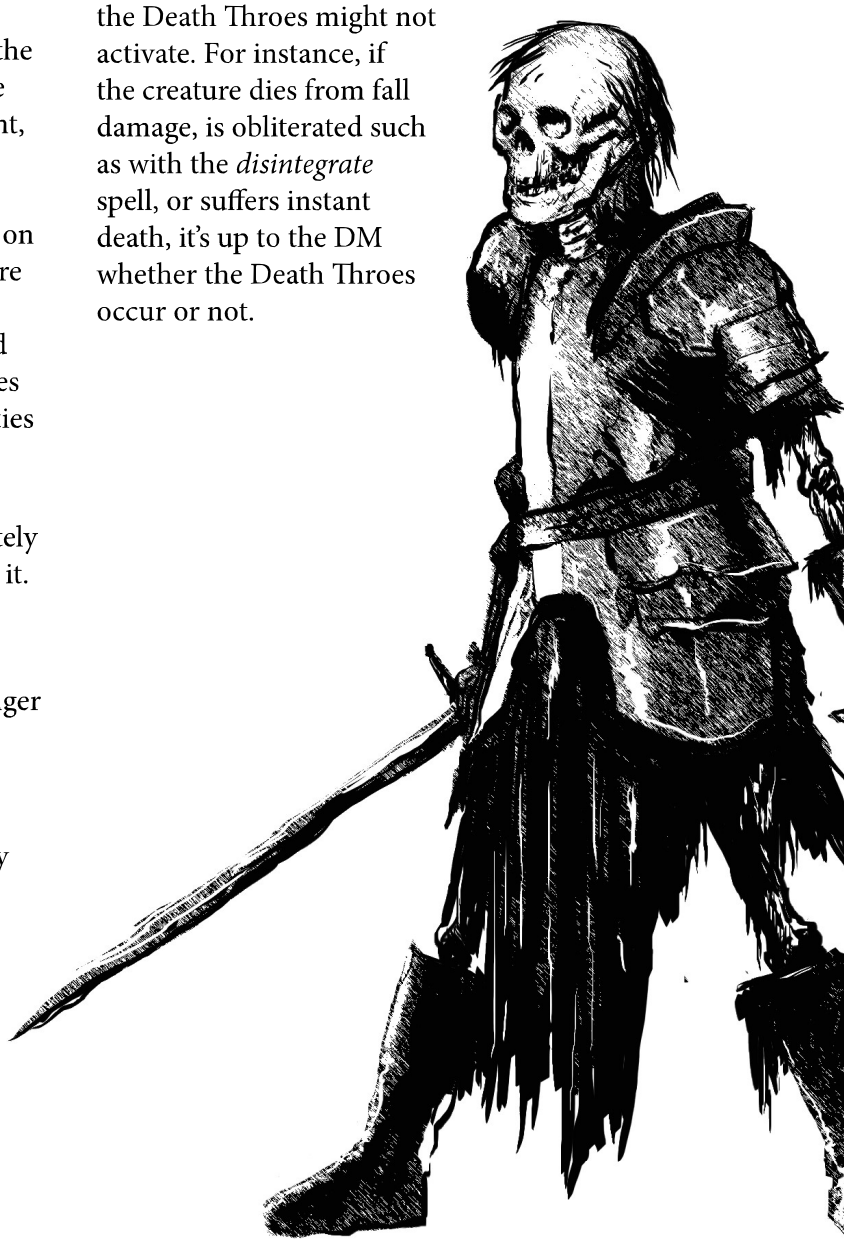
Strength or Frailty. The creature is made stronger or weaker in its bloodied state. This can include changes to its AC, speed, or damage resistances.

Trigger Ability. When the creature becomes bloodied, a unique ability is triggered. The ability only triggers if the creature is able to act it out, meaning that incapacitated creatures can't use trigger abilities in most cases. Likewise, if the trigger ability requires a reaction to fulfill, the creature can't use the ability if it has already used its reaction that round.

DEATH THROES

Death Throes is a new effect added by this book, meant to make the defeat of an enemy stand out as it makes a final show of defiance when slain. It's a unique effect triggered when certain creatures reach 0 hit points and die. Some creatures already have a Death Throes trait written into their stat block. This document adds new Death Throes to several other creatures that the DM can use to make an encounter more destructive or unique.

Depending on the nature of the creature's death, the Death Throes might not activate. For instance, if the creature dies from fall damage, is obliterated such as with the disintegrate spell, or suffers instant death, it's up to the DM whether the Death Throes occur or not.



ANHKOLOX

When bloodied at 78 HP, the anhkolox has the following features.

Frailty: Heavy Load. While bloodied and holding a creature within its rib cage, the anhkolox's speed is lowered by 20 feet (to a minimum of 25 feet.)

New Ability: Rib Cage Crush. As an action while bloodied, the anhkolox can crush the creature grappled in its rib cage. The grappled creature must make a DC 18 Strength saving throw, taking 23 (5d6 + 6) piercing damage on a failed save, or half as much damage on a successful one. The anhkolox then regains a number of hit points equal to half the damage dealt. While bloodied, the anhkolox can make a Rib Cage Crush attack in place of its Entrapping Rend attack when using its Multiattack.

Trigger Ability: Cornered. When first bloodied, the anhkolox can make a Claw attack against a creature within range as a reaction.

CARADOC

When bloodied at 55 HP, Caradoc has the following features.

New Ability: Being of Death. While bloodied, the dragon oozes putrid blood and liquid fire from its body. A creature that falls to 0 hit points while within 60 feet of the dragon automatically fails two death saving throws. In addition, the dragon cannot be restrained, and it has advantage on saving throws against any effect that turns undead.

New Ability: Fling. While bloodied, the dragon can replace one of its Claw attacks with a Fling attack, but only if it just successfully hit a Medium or smaller creature with a Bite attack on the same turn. Then, the creature the dragon just bit is thrown up to 30 feet in a direction of the dragon's choice, landing prone. If a thrown target strikes a solid surface, the target takes 1d6 bludgeoning damage for every 10 feet it was thrown. If the target is thrown at another creature, that creature must succeed on a DC 19 Dexterity saving throw or take the same damage and be knocked prone.

Then, the creature the dragon just bit is thrown up to 30 feet in a direction of the dragon's choice, landing prone. If a thrown target strikes a solid surface, the target takes 1d6 bludgeoning damage for every 10 feet it was thrown. If the target is thrown at another creature, that creature must succeed on a DC 19 Dexterity saving throw or take the same damage and be knocked prone.

Death Throes: Taken from the Stat Block. When the draconian is killed by a creature that is Large or smaller, the draconian crumbles into dust that then forms a spectral, shrieking image of the creature that killed it. The image lasts for 1 minute. Each creature hostile to the draconian within 10 feet of the image must succeed on a DC 14 Wisdom saving throw or be frightened of the spectral image for 1 minute.
